

Sources on Improving College Teaching and Student Learning

By Dr. James Bell, Professor of Psychology. Howard Community College, Columbia MD 21044 jbell@howardcc.edu 410-772-4892 5/1/2001

These lists are designed to put you in contact with the wealth of sources (primarily books) on college teaching. Call numbers are for sources found in Howard Community College's Library. (Call numbers in [] are not yet at HCC.)

The number of useful sites on the Web for college teachers is rapidly expanding. A few of those sources are listed here. W before a source indicates a web source.

For Beginning College Teachers - Go to the next page for the sources I think are more useful to new faculty and the following page for periodicals relevant to college teaching.

For Experienced College Teachers - Here are the sources that you could find if you searched the web, searched the library, and asked others for their favorite sources for over 30 years. Let me know of sources you would like added!

Contents:

Bell's List of Most Useful Sources for College Teaching

Periodicals Relevant to Teaching in College

Sources on College Teaching/Student Learning

Teaching Writing and Writing Across the Curriculum

Teaching Thinking

Teaching Critical Thinking

Assessment In Higher Education

Evaluating College Teaching

For Faculty Working on Their Dissertation and New Faculty

For Part-Time (Adjunct) College Faculty

For (Teaching Assistants)

Lecturing

Active Learning

Small Groups, Group Discussion, Peer Learning and Cooperative Learning

Study Skills, Time Management, Procrastination

Self-Modification, Self-change, Self Control